Jason, I'd prefer to see that in a different forum. The reason it was deleted was because it was being used for advertising.. That's my opinion, but I doubt it would be very popular. .Share This Page I'm trying to include code to change a laptop's default and home folder in the ROM, but the code is being ignored. I was making a video and stopped to transfer over the ROM and changed it back. My script didn't work. It didn't find any devices.

Anyone have a working script for changing the default folder, or should I just stick with the defaults? If you want to change the home directory, just hardcode one. I don't know why that would be hardwired into the existing script as any folder you specify will be hardcoded into the ROM, not take effect for the game, etc. And I don't know why you would want to use an OCZ asap drive, when the WD was most likely a basic manufactured one. If you've got the full list of song ID's then you should try running Replica's script to update the rom instead of an ISO. My problem is I didn't make an ISO. I just want to change the home and default folders for my game, I don't care if the game works or not. Just so I can change the name of the folder. I'm using a WD so I just want the default and home folders to be whatever I want. You'll have to give me the full set of songs. If you search for them, or as I said before, use Replica's script, then I'll give you my script so you can use the set of songs. My full set is the previous files in this thread. My game doesn't allow saving/loading/quitting games, so it isn't an issue right now. What I do is an added file to the rom.

That's also why I'm not using an OCZ drive. As for replacing a folder, that's what your script is doing. You've got the ability to put in your own directory and name it whatever you want. However, I've seen cases where that folder isn't being taken into account for files.
